FIREMEN HAD TO DODGE. REACHED A FIRE AMID A RAIN OF HOUSEHOLD FURNITURE.

Down From the Windows Came Chairs, Tables a Sofa and a Baby Carriage and the Shower Wouldn't Stop-No Danger, but the Tenants Were Bent on Saving All They Could. That there is not a long and dire list of casualties as a result of the fifty-dollar fire in the tenement at 233 Cherry street, early yesterday mornng, is no fault of the tenants. They did their bes and that section of the Fire Department which attended is now congratulating itself on having come off alive. Smoke issuing from the apartnents of Henry Leventhal on the fourth floor started the trouble. Somebody ran around to the quarters of Engine 9 in East Broadway burning down. Other well-intentioned persons stood outside and howled: "Fire! Save yourselves!" at the top of their voices. In this particular tenement the tenants have that courageous disregard for life that goes with a high regard for property. Their first thought was for their belongings, and without waiting to find out how big the fire was they began to hurl from the windows a miscellany of articles to the pavement below. The result was that when the firemen and the police reached the place and tried to go in they found themselves under bombardment. Every moment some household article would hurtle hrough the air and land on the pavement with ment some household article would hurtle through the air and land on the pavement with a crash. All attempts to stop the gunnery practice of the excited tenants by shouts were quite unavailing, so the firemen put their heads down and rushed the fortifications amid a withering fire of lares and penates.

The condition of affairs answered the description given by Senator Platt on Wednesday of the Vice-Presidential situation—everything was in the air. From the second story came household furniture, chiefly bulky; a sofa among other things. Now, a sofa is a soft and restful contrivance under some circumstances, but not when it soars down from a height of fifteen feet. It missed a fireman by about six inches and he went headlong into the door vowing profane vengeance upon the man who threw it. The third story, intentupon saving a brand-new outlit of stove lids, though all else were lost, launched those graceful articles out into space with a prodigality that suggested the presence of enough stoves in the place to equip a factory. Another part of the same floor contributed assorted kitchen utensils. The fourth story vomited bric-à-brac and the fifth emitted a rapid fire of crockery calculated to strike terror to the heart of any insurance agent who might have been around.

What the fireman said is irrelevant and immaterial but by no means incompetent. The foreman, in particular, who had been bestraddled by a baby carriage which came down from an upper window, distinguished himself as a purveyor of oratory, and was ably seconded by a fireman who had become involved with a kitchen table which, at the moment of contact, had crumpled up and curled its legs around him. Just when it seemed as if the building must be empty of all garni-hings of every sort a man appeared in a second story window holding a small figure in long clothes.

"Don't throw the baby," howled the crowd.

"Bring it down the stairs."

"Look out!" shrieked the man, and flung his burden forth.

"Look out!" shrieked the man, and flung his burden forth. It was followed by a mad yell from inside and It was followed by a mad yell from inside and a little girl ran to the window and peered forth just in time to see the doll, which happened to be her pet one, describe a graceful parabola and land on a policeman's helmet. The little girl let out another whoop of grief as the heartless policeman, in inhuman fury, kicked the doll through a neighboring window and then started upstairs to find the man who had thrown it. Meantime the firemen were at work in the Leventhal apartments and in a few minutes had the last vestige of fire out. Nobody could explain how the flames had started. The damage was inconsiderable. Some of the firemen lingered to read the tenants a lecture upon the attraction of gravity in its bearings upon the etiquette of conflagrations.

the attraction of gravity in its bearings upon the etiquette of conflagrations.

When it was all over the sidewalk looked as if a storage warehouse had exploded there. Late in the afternoon the tenants were still matching scraps and fragments of hous-hold goods and discussing the relative merits of various brands of cement. Engine Company 9 has a fine collection of bruises and a scarification or two, but nothing serious enough to go on the records.

LETTER FROM THEIR OLD KING. Oscar of Sweden Writes to the Colony of His People in Maine.

BANGOR, Me., June 21 .- The thrifty colony of wedes, who at the instance of the Hon. William Vidgery Thomas, American Minister to the Court of King Oscar, settled in Arocstock county in 1870, will on Monday celebrate the thirtieth anniversary of their sailing from the old country. Minister Thomas has come home him a letter from King Oscar and the King's latest photograph, as greetings to the colonists. The letter follows:

The letter follows:

"STOCKHOLM, PALACE, April 2, 1900.

"As Mr. W. Thomas, Envoy of the United States of America at my Court, has announced his intention to visit the colony of New Sweden, in the State of Maine, founded by him, which colony proposes in the coming summer to celebrate a festival commemorative of thirty years' prosperous existence. I wish hereby kindly to request the said Envoy, Mr. Thomas, to express my warm well wishes both for the still surviving native Swedes and their posterity in the colony, and also for the continued progress and prosperity of this new home land, so vividly recalling the former 'Old Sweden.'

"Oscar, King of Norway and Sweden."

CLIENT SUES EX-GOV. WALLER'S SON. Says He Lost a Lawsuit and Over $5,000

HARTFORD, Conn., June 21 .- Richard F. Caroll, assistant clerk of the United States District Court in this city, issued a writ of attachment this afternoon for $10,000 on the person of Tracey Waller, son of ex-Gov. Waller, on behalf of James Talcott of New York. Talcott was a creditor of Orlo Atwood & Sons of Dayton, Ohio, who made an assignment Aug. 1, 1893, and he engaged Waller to look after his claim, which was for $54,244.51, secured by $25,000 worth of property. Waller appeared before the Commissioners and prosecuted the claim and they disallowed it. The plaintiff instructed Waller to appeal, according to the complaint, and he did file notice of appeal and furnished the required bond. Then, it is alleged, he failed to use reasonable care and diligence in prosecuting the appeal and did not cause it to be entered on the Superior Court docket, thereby losing to the plaintiff his only chance of appeal. The case is returnable in the United States District Court in Hartford at the October term. The plaintiff asserts that but for the negligence of his attorney he would have received a dividend of over $5,000 and he sues to recover $10,000 damages. Waller to look after his claim, which was for

PIGHT IN A VIRGINIA COURT. Opposing Counsel in the Gilligan Murder Case

Put Under Bonds. RICHMOND, Va., June 21.-Two distinguished awyers engaged in a short puglistic encounter to-day at Isle of Wight Court House, where Andrew Carter Gilligan is on trial charged with the murder of C. Beverly Turner. The parties to the fray were the Hon. Drury Hinton, once a member of the Supreme Court of Virginia and former State Senator R. E. Boykin. Col. Boykin in arguing the case made what Hinton considered a reflection upon a ruling of his while he was on the bench, and he interjected a remark that roused Boykin's fighting blood.

Boykin struck the Judge on the jaw and was about to pursue his advantage with the aid of a heavy chair, when the spectators interfered. Judge Hinton remarked that Col. Boykin was a dog and the latter rejoined that Hinton was a damped liar. Then the Judge offered to whip Boykin inside of a couple of minutes.

The Court here awoke to the fact that something unusual was in progress, he called the lawyers up and put them under bonds of $500 each. Boykin announced that he would forfeit his bond readily if Judge Hinton was not more circumspect in his remarks. to the fray were the Hon. Drury Hinton, once

For Trying to Sell Stolen Beer Stamps. Thomas Riley, who with Thomas Blaney, a
